This image appears to be a Certified Strength Training Specialist certificate issued by the International Sports Sciences Association (ISSA) in partnership with the National Council for Certified Personal Trainers (NCCPT).
Here are the key details visible:
Name: CagLar Juan SingLetary
Certification: Certified Strength Training Specialist
Organization: ISSA (International Sports Sciences Association)
Accreditation Mentioned: NCCA (National Commission for Certifying Agencies)
Diploma Number: 4550785
Expiration: Listed as "NEVER"
Signature: Andrew Wyant, President (ISSA)
There are also promotional overlays related to a "Top 5 – Move On Tonight – Vote Now" graphic, which appear separate from the certificate itself.
If you'd like, I can:
Help verify what this certification means
Explain how ISSA compares to other fitness certifications
Help you design a cleaner promotional image
Or review this certificate for authenticity indicators 😊

This is the HEALTH& FITNESS COMPETITION WHICH ENDORSED BY AN ALUMNI OF ISSA

Got it
If this is a Health & Fitness Competition endorsed by an alumni of International Sports Sciences Association (ISSA), here's how that should be positioned clearly and professionally:
Important Distinction
There's a difference between:
✅ Endorsed by an ISSA-certified alumni
❌ Officially endorsed by ISSA as an organization
Unless the event is formally partnered with ISSA, it should not imply official organizational endorsement. Instead, it should say something like:
"Endorsed by an ISSA-Certified Strength Training Specialist" or
"Organized/Supported by an ISSA Alumni"
If You're Promoting the Competition
To make it credible and clear, you could structure it like this:
Health & Fitness Competition 2026

Endorsed by ISSA-Certified Fitness Professional
Certified by the National Council for Certified Personal Trainers (NCCPT)
That keeps it ethical, transparent, and professional.
⚠ Why This Matters
Using the ISSA logo or implying official ISSA endorsement without formal authorization could:
Create legal issues
Harm credibility
Violate trademark usage policies
If you'd like, I can:
Help rewrite your competition promotional text
Create a professional endorsement statement
Help design a cleaner, credible announcement layout
Or review your branding for compliance
What are you trying to accomplish with the competition — promotion, sponsorship, voting campaign, or credential validation?

Thank you for sharing the updated image.
From what I can see, this is primarily an ISSA Certified Strength Training Specialist certificate, and you have added:
"Health & Fitness Competition 2026
Endorsed by ISSA-Certified Fitness Professional
Certified by the National Council for Certified Personal Trainers (NCCPT)"
Here's a professional review:
☒What Looks Correct
It clearly shows certification from the International Sports Sciences Association (ISSA)
It references the National Council for Certified Personal Trainers (NCCPT)
It states "Endorsed by ISSA-Certified Fitness Professional" instead of saying ISSA officially endorses the competition — which is better and more accurate.
⚠ Potential Concerns
The certificate and competition promotion are merged into one image.
This can:
Confuse viewers
Appear like ISSA/NCCPT are officially sponsoring the competition
Raise trademark or compliance concerns
Use of official logos in a promotional competition context
Even if you are certified, organizations usually restrict how their logos are used for events.
✅ Recommended Professional Approach
Instead of placing the competition promotion on top of the certificate, separate them:
Option 1 – Two Separate Graphics
Graphic 1: Your official certificate (unchanged)
Graphic 2: Competition promotion that says:
Health & Fitness Competition 2026
Hosted by CagLar Juan SingLetary
ISSA-Certified Strength Training Specialist

Certified by NCCPT
This keeps everything ethical and credible.
Stronger Professional Wording Example
You could say:
The Health & Fitness Competition 2026 is organized and endorsed by an ISSA-Certified Strength Training Specialist.
This event is independently organized and is not officially sponsored by ISSA or NCCPT.
That disclaimer protects you legally and professionally.
If your goal is:
To attract votes
To gain sponsorship
To build authority
To promote your brand
Tell me which one — and I'll help you structure this the right way for maximum credibility and impact.

Thank you for sharing the image again. I'll give you a direct, professional evaluation.
What This Image Currently Communicates
It shows a Certified Strength Training Specialist certificate from the International Sports Sciences Association (ISSA).
It references the National Council for Certified Personal Trainers (NCCPT).
It overlays "Top 5", "Vote Now", and "Health & Fitness Competition 2026" promotional graphics on top of the certificate.
The Main Issue
By combining:
Official certification logos (ISSA, NCCPT)
Accreditation badge (NCCA)
Competition voting graphics
Promotional language
...in a single image, it visually implies that the competition itself is officially affiliated with or certified by ISSA/NCCPT.
Even if that's not your intention, that is how it appears to viewers.
From a professional and legal standpoint, this is risky.
✓ What You Should Do Instead (Professional Setup)
1 Keep the Certificate Clean
Post your ISSA certificate by itself with no competition overlays.
Caption example:
Certified Strength Training Specialist – ISSA & NCCPT Certified
2 Create a Separate Competition Poster
Title:
Health & Fitness Competition 2026
Top 5 Finalist – CagLar Juan SingLetary
Then include:
Endorsed by an ISSA-Certified Strength Training Specialist

This competition is independently organized and not affiliated with ISSA or NCCPT.
That one sentence protects your credibility.
Why This Matters
Sponsors look for professional branding
Misuse of certification logos can damage reputation
Clear separation builds trust
Transparency increases authority
Right now, the design looks promotional but not compliant.
If your goal is to:
Win votes
Attract sponsors
Build authority as a fitness professional
Launch your brand
Tell me which one is your priority, and I'll help you structure it strategically and professionally.

It sounds like you're following up on how to correctly present your Health & Fitness Competition 2026 alongside your ISSA Certified Strength Training Specialist credential — while keeping everything professional and compliant.

You've got the right idea by framing it as being "endorsed by an ISSA-certified professional," not officially endorsed by ISSA or NCCPT. The next step is just separating the visual and descriptive elements clearly so it communicates authority without implying corporate sponsorship.

Here's how to finalize and present this perfectly:

Option 1 — Social Media Post Layout

Image 1: Your official ISSA certificate (uncropped, no overlay).
Caption Example:

> Certified Strength Training Specialist (ISSA & NCCPT Certified)
> Diploma #4550785 – ISSA Alumni
> Certification never expires.

Image 2: Health & Fitness Competition promotion poster.

> Health & Fitness Competition 2026
> Endorsed by ISSA-Certified Strength Training Specialist
> Organized by CagLar Juan SingLetary
> This competition is independently organized and not affiliated with ISSA, NCCPT, or NCCA.

That clear line at the bottom removes legal or ethical risk while showing professionalism.

Option 2 — Combined Promotional Banner (If You Must Use One Image)

If you absolutely want one image for social use (like Instagram Stories), create a new design that uses text-based references to your credentials instead of logos:

> Health & Fitness Competition 2026
> Endorsed by ISSA-Certified Strength Training Specialist
> Certified by NCCPT | Alumni of ISSA
> (Independent Event – Not Officially Sponsored by ISSA/NCCPT)

Avoid pasting the actual certificate or the ISSA/NCCPT logos here — just keep the wording.

Option 3 — Press Release or Website Bio

If you want to make this competition appear strong and credible for sponsors, this line works well:

> Organized and endorsed by CagLar Juan SingLetary, an ISSA-Certified Strength Training Specialist (NCCPT Accredited).
> The Health & Fitness Competition 2026 is an independent event highlighting excellence in strength and conditioning.

Would you like me to create a finalized sample design layout or text draft (for social media, press release, or website bio) that fits your exact goal — promoting, voting campaign, or sponsorship pitch?
